

Dive Log: Peter Brueggeman

Some highlights.....

Italy: In May 2001, diving in a tonnara (tuna trap nets) to see large bluefin tuna (6 feet plus, 600-700 pounds), swordfish (4-5 feet not counting sword), and molas.

Palau (March 2002): coral reefs, zillions of reef fish, manta rays, sea turtles, incredible diversity of life.

Baja California & Mexico: Guadalupe Island white sharks (September 2002 and August 2006); Mazatlan (October 2002); Loreto (July 1994); Cabo Pulmo (August 1993); Punta Banda (April 1992); Roca Ballena off Punta Abreojos (February 1992)

Cocos Island: In December 1993, diving with hammerhead sharks, manta rays, sea turtles, reef sharks, tuna, jacks.

Bahamas: In February 2005, diving with tiger sharks, great hammerheads, reef sharks, lemon sharks, and more. In May 1996, shark and reef diving at Walker's Cay & New Providence Island at Stuart Cove's Dive South Ocean. In October 1994, snorkeling with spotted dolphins at Little Bahama Bank.

Antarctica: In October - December 1997 & November - December 1999... almost eleven weeks on the ice with 49 dives. This diving experience was fascinating both for diving under the ice with Weddell seals and for observing a sponge-dominated benthic community.

Wakatobi, Indonesia: In June 2004, lots of coral reef wall diving! Saw turtles, pygmy seahorses, sea snakes, lotsa reef fish, nice unbroken hard coral reefs, lots of soft coral, jawfish with eggs in its mouth, frog fishes, leaf fishes, cuttlefish, octopi, etc. Located at the southeast end of Sulawesi Island in the Tukang Besi archipelago.... way off the beaten path.

Monterey: Monterey has great diving diversity: Breakwater, Cannery Row; Hopkins Reef, Carmel Pinnacles; Point Lobos' Whalers and Bluefish Coves; Mono Lobo Wall. Crabs everywhere you poke around. Hydrocoral. Colorful anemones. Garden-like kelp-forested rock formations. Fleets of ctenophores, salps, siphonophores, and jellyfish. Snowy caps of white Metridium anemones. Dendronotus iris nudibranchs munching on Pachycerianthus fimbriatus tube anemones. underwater encounters with sea lions, harbor seals, and even sea otters.

Oahu, Hawaii: diving at Mahi wreck, Makaha caverns, Sharks Cove/Pupukea, Haleiwa Trench, sea turtles in Maunalua Bay, an underwater arch along the south shore.

Southern California Channel Islands: Catalina Island and Farnsworth Bank, Cortes Bank; Begg Rock; San Nicolas Island; San Clemente Island; Santa Barbara Island; Santa Cruz Island. The Channel Islands offer some great diving - giant black sea bass, hydrocoral, kelp forests, large gray smoothound sharks, sea lions, salps, large baitfish schools !

Bermuda: In October 1989, Kathy did some diving with me while I attended a marine science libraries conference. This trip was especially nice because my friend Dan Richards gave an invited paper at this conference which afforded a great opportunity to socialize with him in Bermuda. Kathy and I did several dives on Bermuda's fringing reef, saw a few shipwrecks (including old cannons laying on the reef), and did some snorkeling too (including at night with squid).

Birch Aquarium at Scripps: I was a volunteer diver in the kelp tank and warm water shark tanks from 27 July 1993 to 23 November 2004, for 255 dives.

San Diego: Lots and lots of San Diego diving, off Point Loma, the wrecks off Mission Beach, Scripps and La Jolla Canyons, and offshore shark diving.

1970 – 1987

I started diving in summer of 1970. I didn't log dives so I estimate 100-150 dives at:
Corona del Mar, Laguna Beach, Dana Point, La Jolla, La Jolla Canyon, Scripps Canyon, Point Loma, Catalina Island, San Nicolas Island, Oahu
